After having started to live at the Higashikata House, Josuke learned of the existence of a disease that had been passed down many generations which makes one turn to stone and die, as well as a fruit that was said to cure it. And from later investigation, he found that he had come to Morioh chasing after the mystery of that disease.

Working with Tsurugi and Yasuho, Josuke found the owner of a flower pot containing that fruit. A man named Aishō Dainenjiyama who works at Morioh Stadium. Those two trailed Aishō in order to find where he was cultivating the fruits, but he caught on to them and they ended up with him targeting their lives. —Places Rock Humans Like—

Shrine grounds
Parks with statues
The gardens of expensive houses
(For some reason) Underneath trees with squirrels
Underneath maple trees

Sleep will hit suddenly at different times depending on the individual. Once asleep, they will stay asleep for 30 to 90 days.

Once they've woken up, they will not sleep again for no less than 2 months.

There are shallow cracks on the surface.

The number of them matches their age in years.

Let us observe a hibernating Rock Human.

If they detect the fixed camera we have set up, we'll be killed!

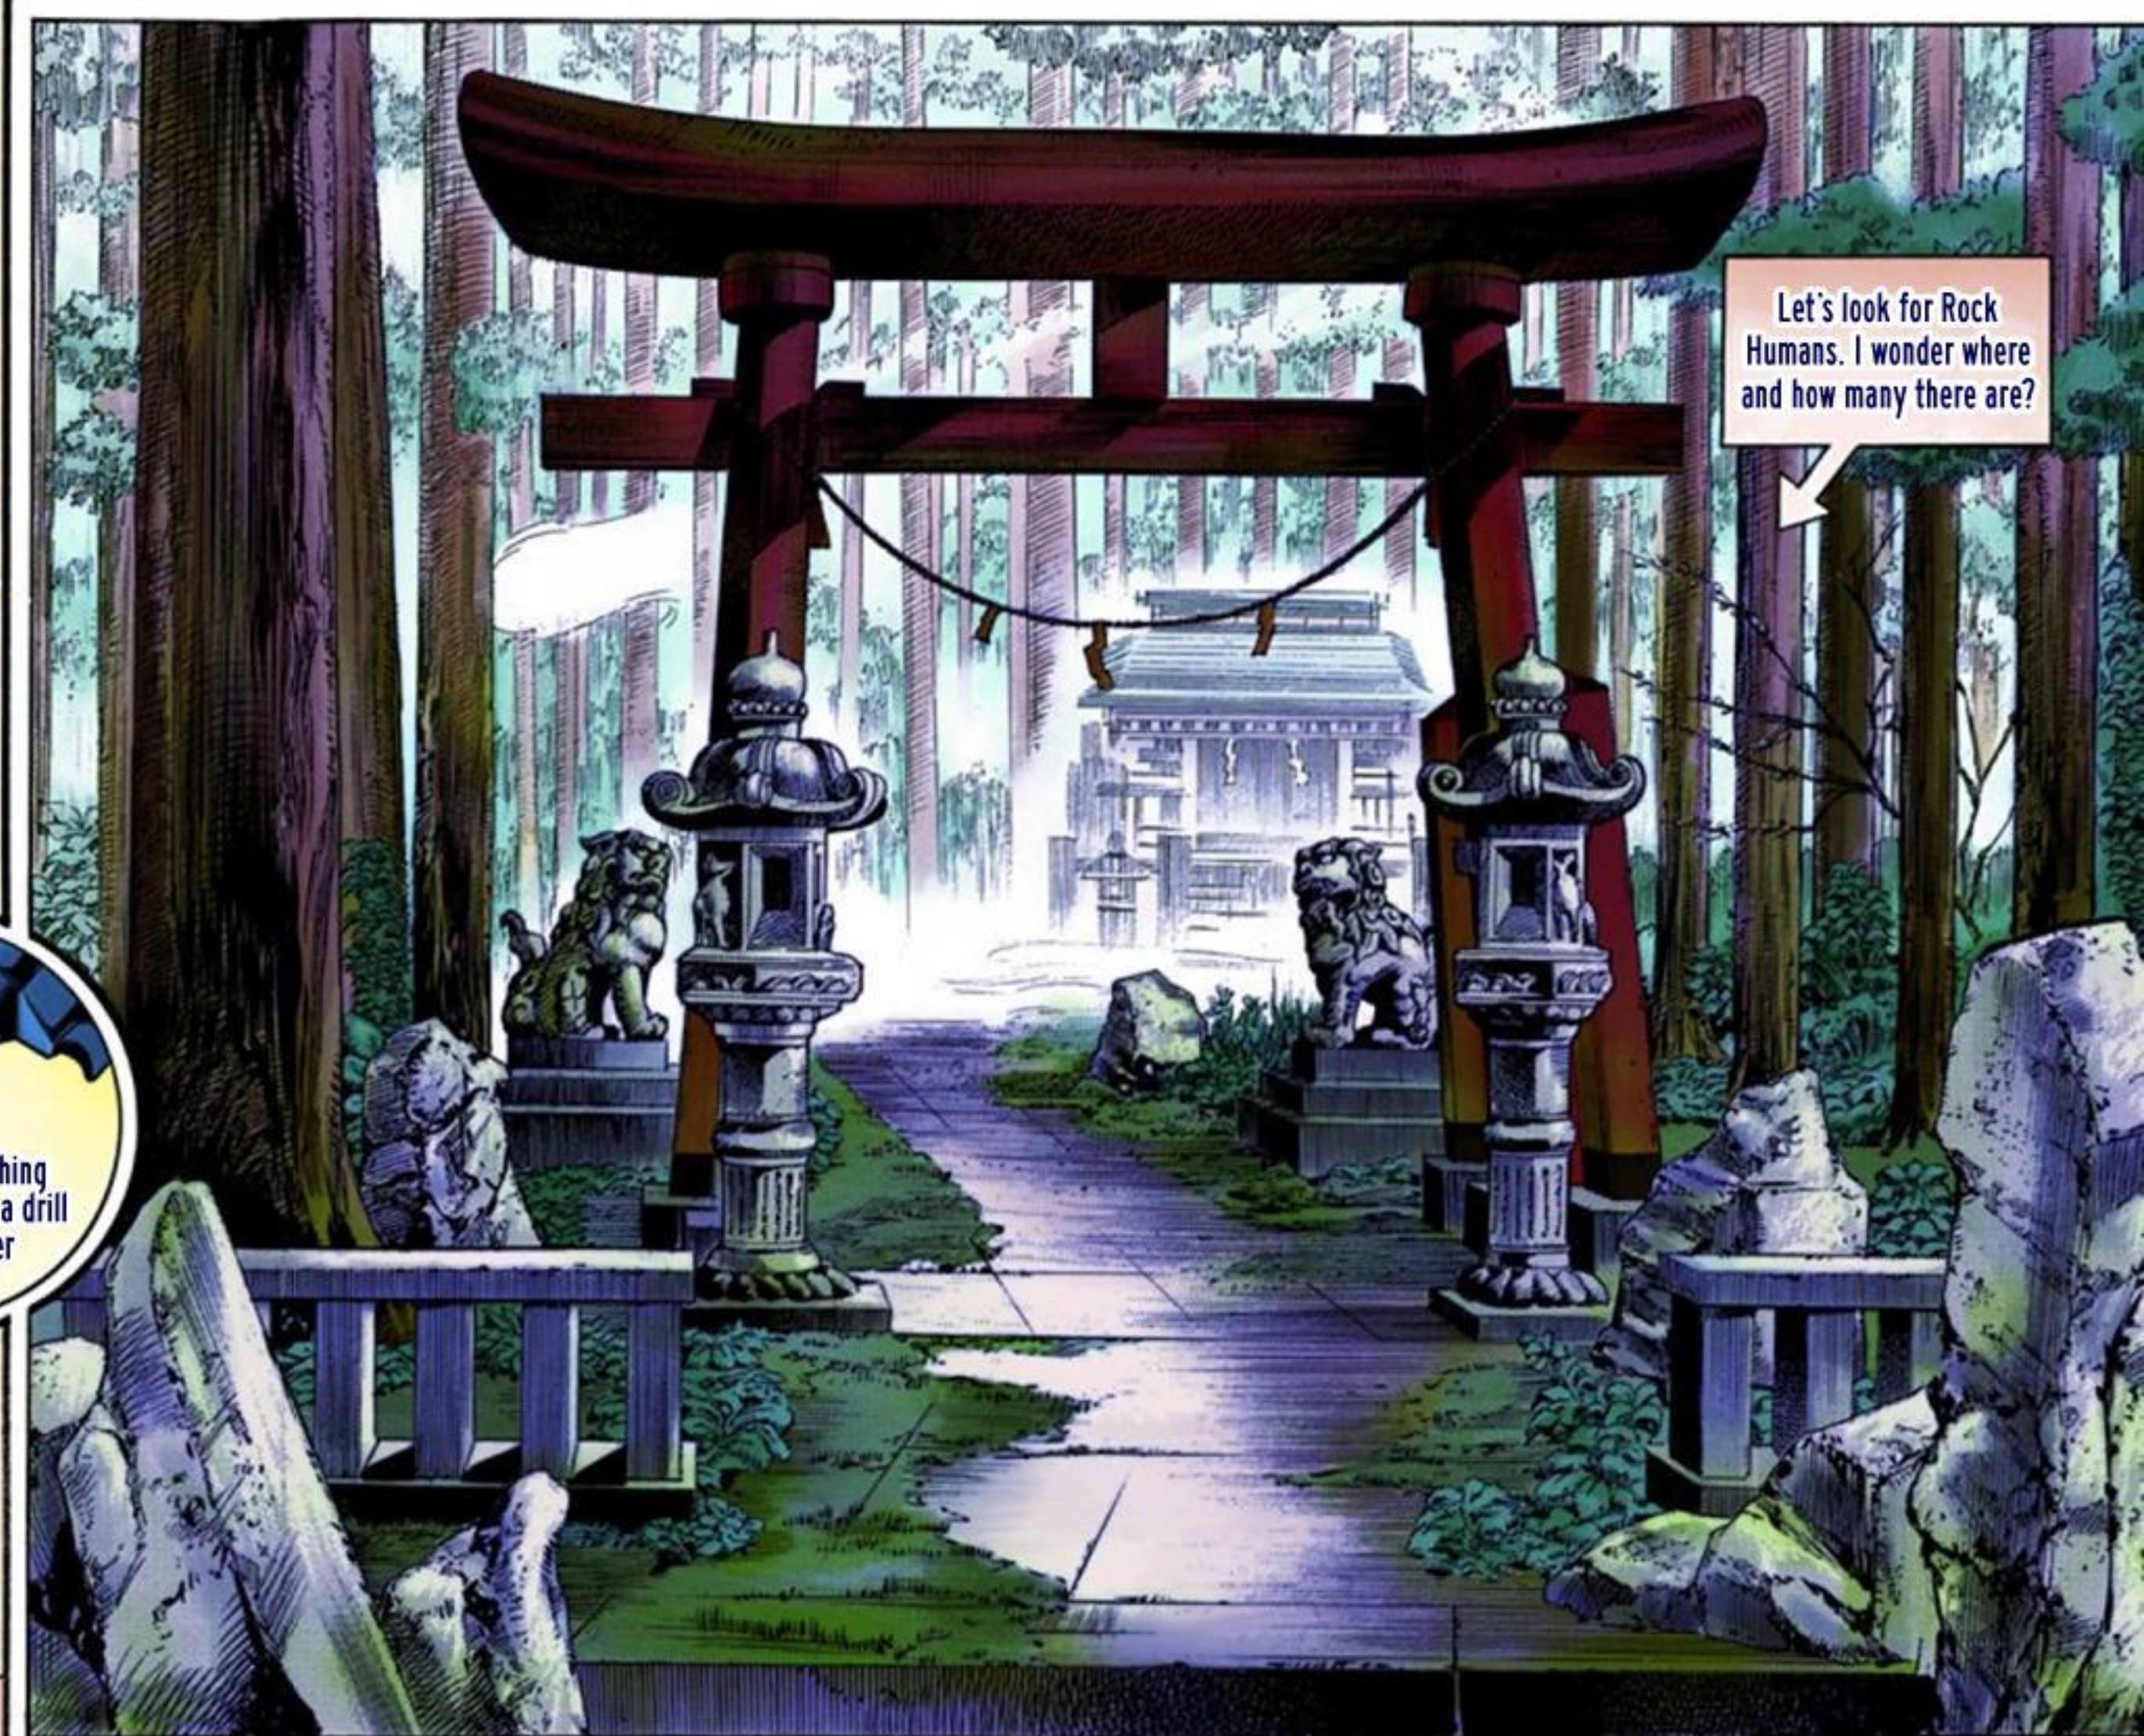

Nearly no scent. Sometimes dogs can sniff them out, but they do not take an interest and leave.

Breathing is halted as well, but there is a faint skin respiration through these cracks.

They can live for over 25 years in conditions of sleeping in 950°C at a maximum and -240°C at a minimum.

Their body heat disappears.

Let's look for Rock Humans. I wonder where and how many there are?

Mushrooms called Hypholoma fasciculare are prone to growing on them. They are poisonous.

Internal waste products are also used in the hardening.

There are some that create pearls in 60 days.

Moss called liverwort is prone to growing on them.

With something strong like a drill or a hammer

Regarding Hardening:

A cell system which makes all moisture move to the interior, drying them.

The carbon-rich cell walls close like shelter doors.

We cannot recommend vandalism. When chipped, they bleed.

The pulse disappears as well. (Strictly speaking in the deepest parts of them, there are 1 to 2 strokes of pulse in 3 minutes and a faint electric signal.)

—Disliked Places—

Places where there were previously eruptions, floods, or landslides.
Places where like the bottom of a body of water or underground where there is risk of suffocating when they wake up.
Places where birds will poop on them.
Places they will get covered in Anacardiaceae tree sap.

If they are carrying any small items on them, they will be covered with a hard membrane with them. When they wake up, it tears off like a scab.

Let's try setting up a fixed camera and see what we can record.

Answer: 2 (Probably)

95% of Rock Humans are Stand Users

There are males and females.
They have sex and give birth to children.

Visually, they are no different from humans. The skin of an awakened Rock Human is slightly moist, damp, and erotic.

On rare occasions, they will fall in love with humans of the opposite sex, but according to statistics they break up 97.5% of the time. The breakups end in the form of murder. Biologically, they cannot have children with humans.

They transform every 6 years.

Early Childhood

Adolescence 1

Adolescence 2

Prime 1

They do not change bit by bit, they grow by molting and change their form all at once. The transformation occurs during sleep. Their estimated life span is 240 years.

As they age, the poses they make as they sleep changes. Why it changes is unknown.

Eating Habits

All individuals show an allergy to mango and love honey. They eat vegetables, nuts, fruit, meat, and fish; all kinds of living things.

Theology and Philosophy

They believe in the powers found in the earth and in nature. They have a reverence and humbleness towards that power. For biological or perhaps historical reasons, it is impossible for them to coexist or reach mutual understanding with humans.

Social Life and Language

Because they are fundamentally able to live through changes in temperature, storms, droughts, and the like, they do not need have assets like savings, a house, or land. Nor do they try to have collectivity or countries. However, because their land and living environments have diminished due to the increase in the human population and advances in human culture over the last few thousand years, some take the form of parasites and live with them. They gain human knowledge, speak human language, snatch family registers, gain land and assets and slip in among them. Rather than having a desire to possess things, it is purely parasitism. They are just using human society for their own ends.

They sleep for several months, so they cannot hold jobs which have business hours.

Aishō Dai-nenjiyama is a (non-regular) security guard.

Yotsuyu Yagiyama is an architect.

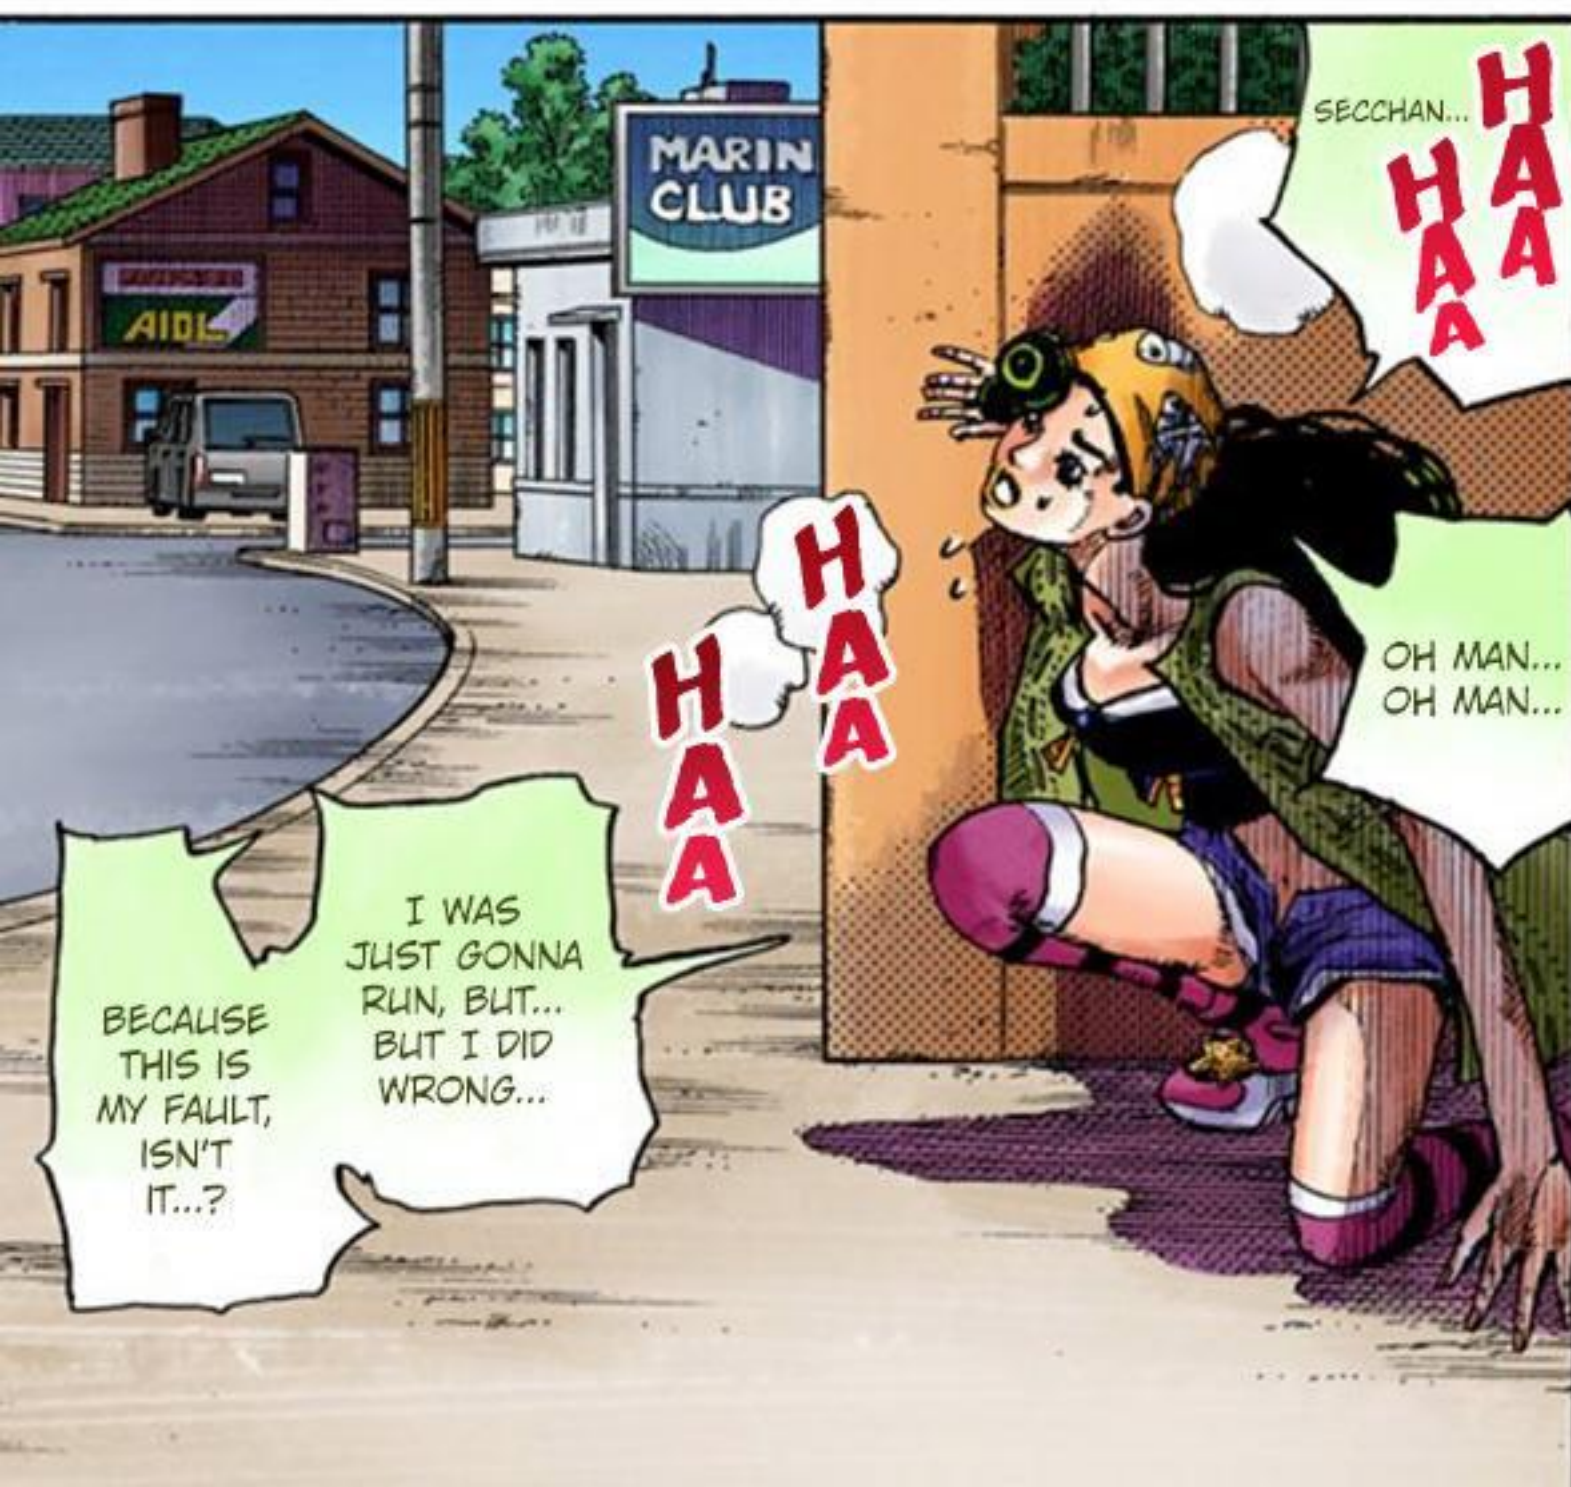

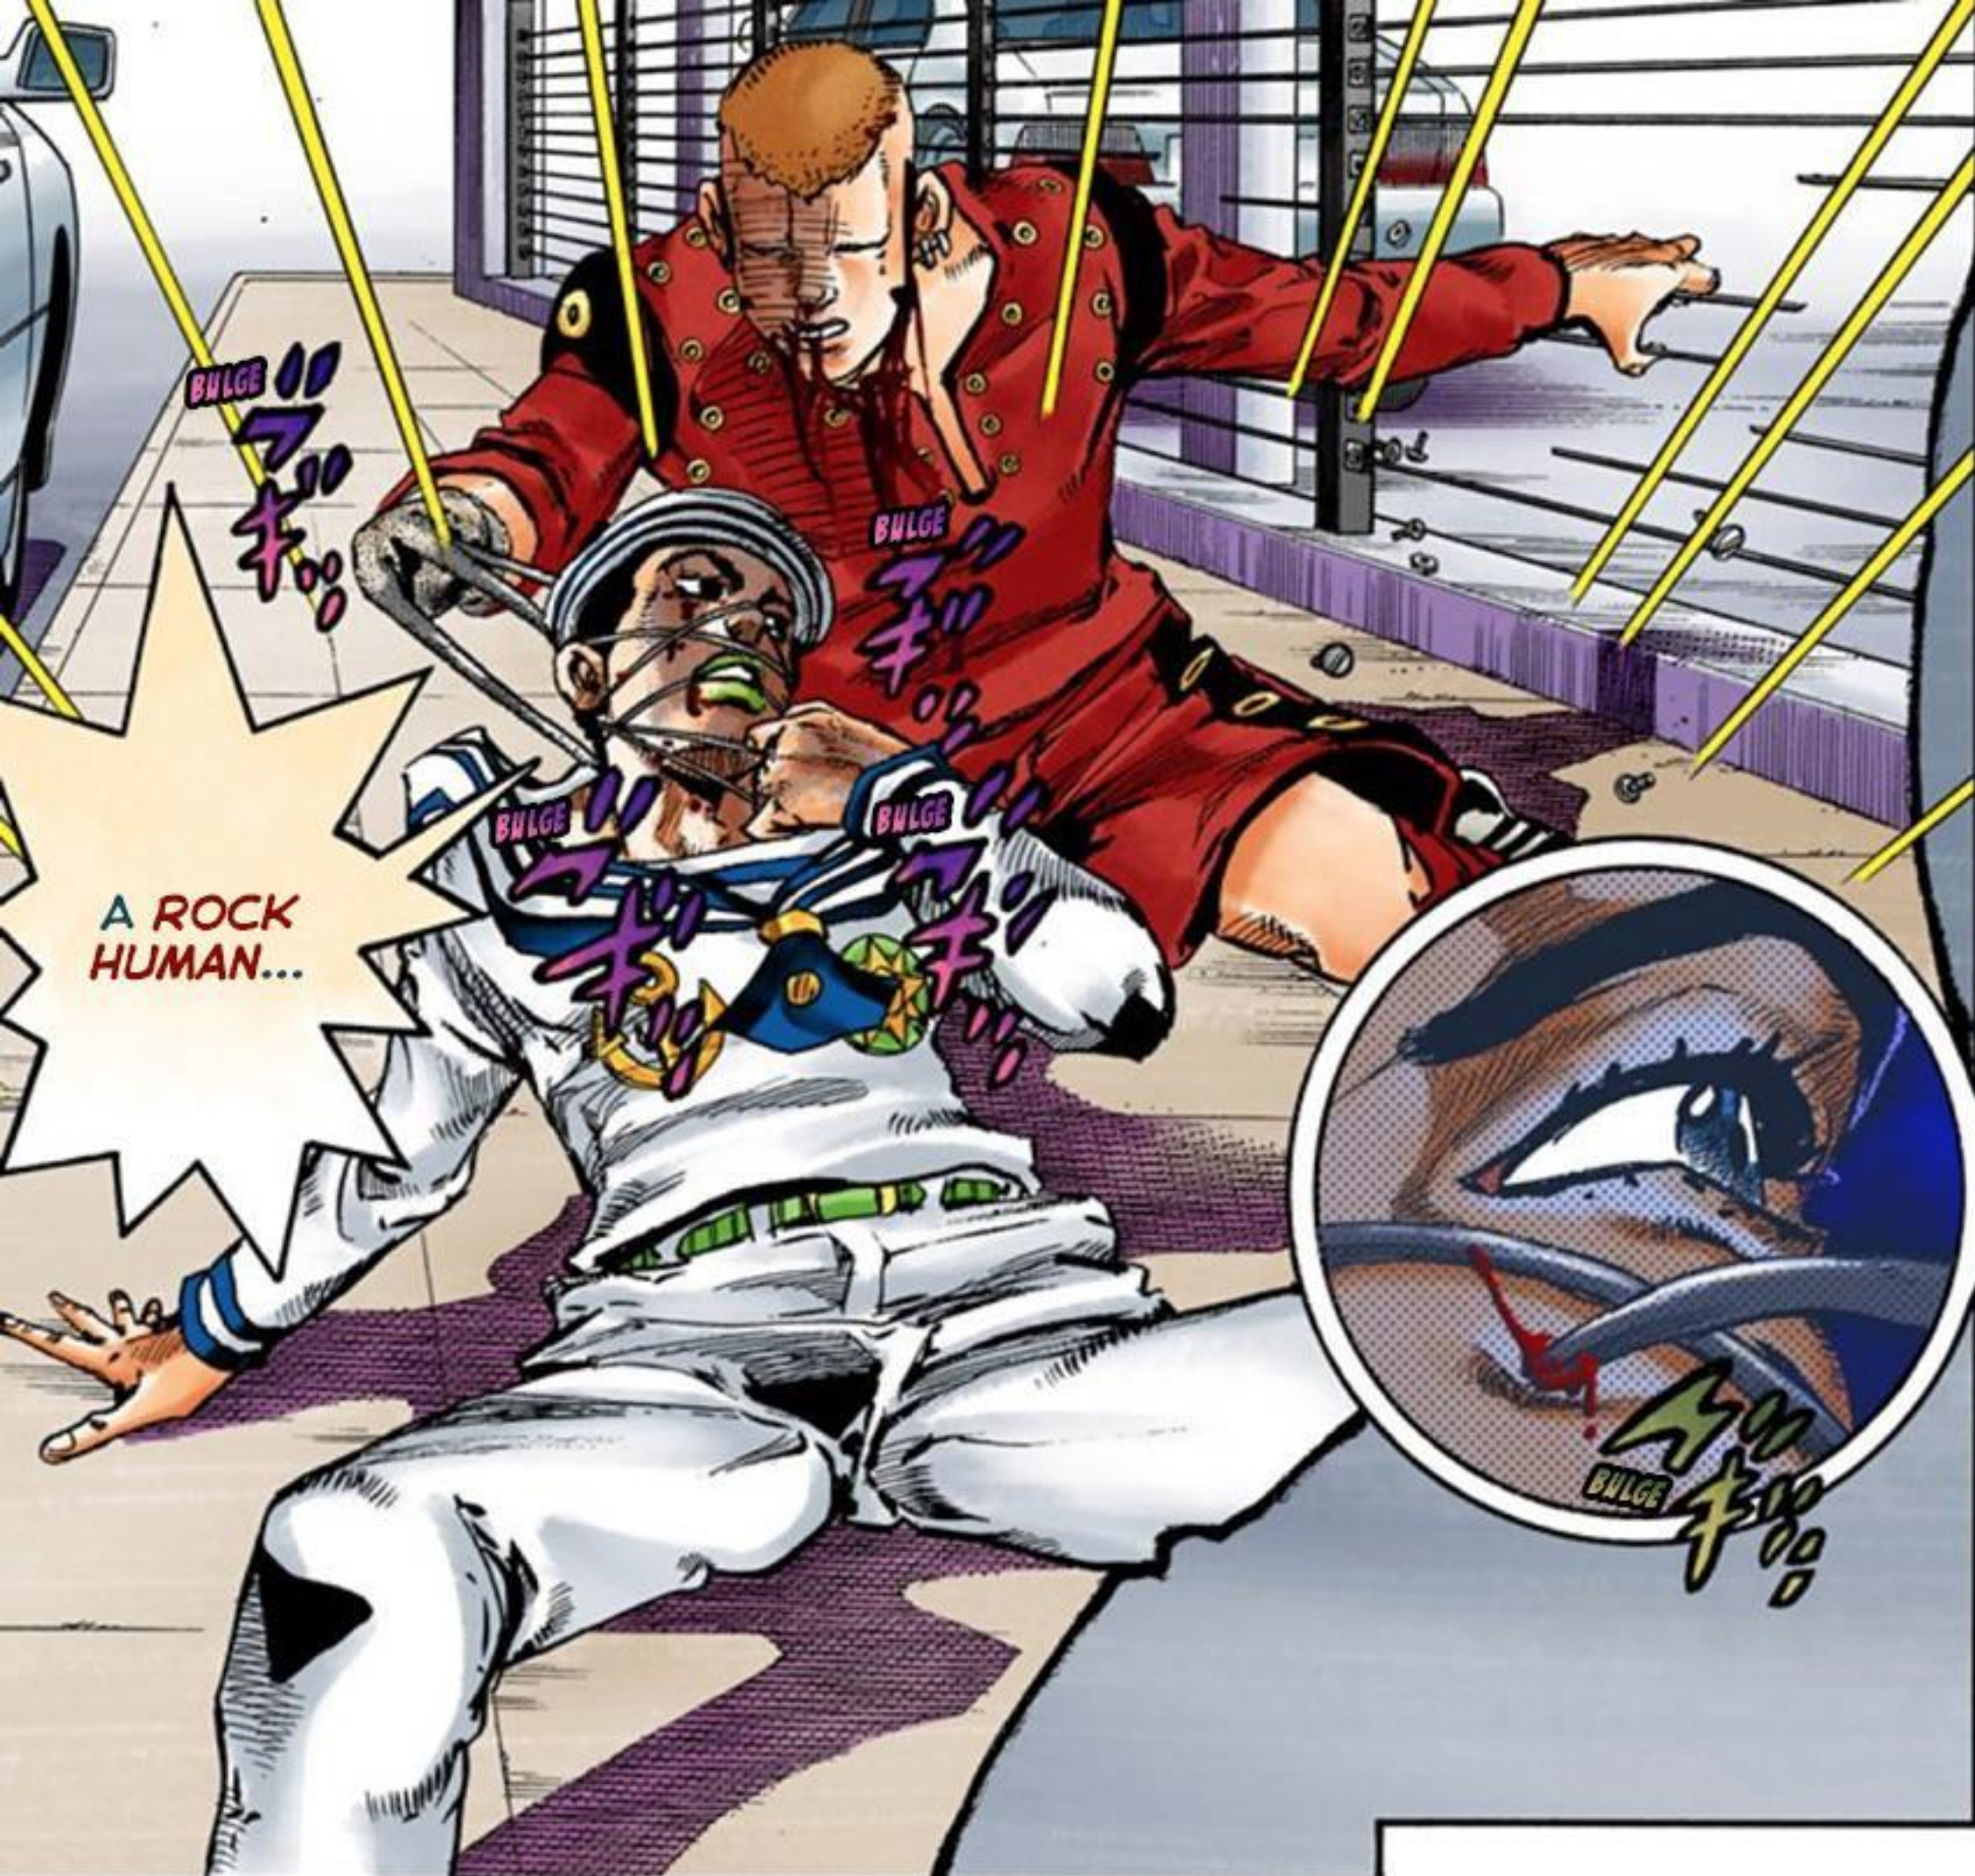

People like mangakas that take lots of breaks are very suspicious.

Death

Their corpses break apart shortly after death. No mummies or fossils have been found.
